Active Listening

- Show Genuine Interest: Pay attention to his responses and ask follow-up questions based on what he says. This demonstrates that you value his thoughts and opinions.
- Body Language: Maintain open and inviting body language. Nod, smile, and maintain eye contact to show that you are engaged in the conversation.

Be Open and Relatable

- Share Your Own Experiences: When he answers your questions, share your own thoughts and experiences related to the topic. This creates a sense of balance in the conversation and fosters connection.
- Avoid Controversial Topics: Stick to light-hearted subjects, especially in the beginning stages of getting to know someone. Avoid discussions about politics or religion until you have established a deeper rapport.

Be Mindful of His Comfort Level

- Read His Reactions: Pay attention to his body language and tone of voice. If he seems uncomfortable or disinterested, it may be best to change the subject.
- Respect Boundaries: If he appears hesitant to answer a question, don't press for details. Instead, gracefully move on to another topic.
