Changes to AP US History Exam in 2020

The year 2020 brought unprecedented modifications to the AP US History exam due to the global COVID-19 pandemic. The College Board made strategic adjustments to accommodate remote learning environments and reduce student stress. These changes affected the exam format, content coverage, and timing.

Modified Exam Format

In 2020, the AP US History exam was administered in a shortened, online format. Instead of the traditional multi-hour, in-person test, students completed a 45-minute free-response section from home. This free-response section included one document-based question (DBQ) and one long essay question (LEQ), reflecting a condensed assessment style.

Reduced Content Scope

The College Board narrowed the curriculum for the 2020 exam to focus only on content from periods 3 to 8, spanning approximately 1754 to 2001. This decision allowed educators and students to concentrate on a more manageable set of historical themes and events, ensuring depth over breadth during a challenging academic year.

Alternative Testing Options

For students unable to take the online exam on the scheduled date, the College Board offered an alternative exam date later in the summer of 2020. Both exams maintained the same format and content scope to ensure fairness and consistency.
