The bicameral structure balances representation by population and state equality, which is fundamental to the legislative process.

The presidency leads the executive branch, implementing laws and conducting foreign policy. The president's powers include veto authority, executive orders, and appointment of federal officials. The executive administration supports these functions, managing various governmental departments and agencies.

The Judicial Branch: Supreme Court and Federal Courts

The judicial branch interprets laws and ensures their constitutionality. The Supreme Court serves as the highest court, setting legal precedents through landmark decisions. Federal courts handle cases involving federal law, with the judiciary serving as a check on legislative and executive power.
