The story is set against the backdrop of Kerala, a state in southern India, and unfolds through a non-linear narrative that oscillates between the past and the present.

Overview of the Novel

The God of Small Things is a semi-autobiographical work that chronicles the lives of fraternal twins, Estha and Rahel, and their family, particularly focusing on the events surrounding their childhood. Through vivid imagery and lyrical prose, Roy explores themes of love, loss, and the impact of historical and cultural forces on individual lives.

Plot Summary

The narrative is structured around two primary timelines: one in 1969 when the twins are seven years old and another in 1993 when they are adults. The events of their childhood serve as the foundation for the novel's exploration of how small moments can lead to significant, often tragic consequences.

- Childhood Events: The story revolves around the twins' interactions with their mother, Ammu, their uncle Chacko, their grandmother Mammachi, and their great-aunt Baby Kochamma. The family is deeply affected by societal norms, particularly the rigid caste system that governs their lives.
- The Forbidden Love: Central to the plot is the forbidden love between Ammu and Velutha, a man from a lower caste, known as the Untouchables. Their relationship is fraught with danger, and it ultimately leads to catastrophic consequences for the entire family.
- The Tragedy: The narrative builds towards a tragic climax that irrevocably alters the lives of the characters. The fallout from this pivotal moment reverberates through the years, affecting not only the twins but also their entire family.

Thematic Exploration

Caste and Class

- Social Injustice: The consequences of transgressing these societal boundaries are devastating, as seen in the tragic fate of Ammu and Velutha. Roy uses these characters to illustrate the harsh realities of caste discrimination and the emotional toll it takes on individuals.

Love and Loss

The exploration of love is multifaceted in the novel, encompassing different forms of love—familial, romantic, and platonic. Each type is affected by the broader societal constraints that dictate the characters' lives.

- Familial Relationships: The bond between Estha and Rahel is central to the narrative. Their connection transcends the trauma they experience, symbolizing a pure, untainted love amidst the chaos surrounding them.
