Phases of Bantu Migration

Bantu migration can be divided into several key phases:

1. Initial Migration (1000 BCE - 500 CE): During this period, Bantu-speaking peoples began to migrate from their homeland in West Africa. They moved southward and eastward, spreading their agricultural practices and language.
2. Expansion into Central and Southern Africa (500 CE - 1500 CE): The Bantu expanded into the Congo Basin and further into Southern Africa, reaching modern-day countries such as Angola, Zambia, Zimbabwe, and South Africa. This phase saw the establishment of new agricultural societies.
3. Interactions with Other Cultures (1500 CE - 1800 CE): As the Bantu encountered other ethnic groups, including hunter-gatherers and pastoralists, they engaged in trade, intermarriage, and sometimes conflict. These interactions enriched Bantu culture and language.
