Bikram Yoga Teacher Training is an intensive program designed for individuals who wish to deepen their practice of yoga while gaining the skills necessary to teach others. Originating from the Bikram Yoga style developed by Bikram Choudhury, this training focuses on a specific sequence of 26 postures and two breathing exercises performed in a heated room. This article will explore the various aspects of Bikram Yoga Teacher Training, including its history, structure, benefits, and what to expect during the training process.

History of Bikram Yoga

Bikram Yoga was founded in the early 1970s by Bikram Choudhury, who adapted traditional Hatha yoga practices into a systematic approach that emphasizes physical and mental discipline. Choudhury developed a sequence of 26 postures, each designed to stretch and strengthen the body while promoting detoxification and mental clarity. The practice is conducted in a room heated to approximately 105°F (40°C) with 40% humidity, which is believed to enhance flexibility and facilitate the release of toxins.

The popularity of Bikram Yoga surged in the 1990s, leading to the establishment of Bikram Yoga studios around the world. As the practice continued to grow, a structured teacher training program was developed to ensure that prospective instructors received comprehensive education in both the physical and theoretical aspects of Bikram Yoga.
