Avoid Names that Sound Like Commands

Choose a name that doesn't sound similar to common commands like "sit," "stay," or "come." This will help prevent confusion during training sessions.

Test the Name

Before settling on a name, try calling your dog with it for a few days. Observe her reaction to see if she responds positively.

Consider Future Changes

Remember that your dog will grow and change over time. Choose a name that suits her as a puppy and as an adult.

Involve the Family

If you live with family members or roommates, involve them in the naming process. This can help ensure everyone feels connected to the name.
