Causes of World War 2 Worksheet Answer Key

The causes of World War II are intricate and multifaceted, comprising a blend of political, economic, and social factors that led to one of the deadliest conflicts in human history. Understanding these causes is essential for grasping the larger narrative of the 20th century. This article seeks to provide a comprehensive overview of the primary causes of World War II, which can serve as an answer key to a worksheet on this topic.

1. Treaty of Versailles

One of the most significant factors that contributed to the outbreak of World War II was the Treaty of Versailles, which officially ended World War I in 1919. The treaty imposed harsh penalties and reparations on Germany, leading to widespread resentment among the German populace.

Key Points:

- Reparations: Germany was required to pay massive reparations, which crippled its economy.
- Territorial Losses: Germany lost significant territories, leading to a sense of national humiliation.
- Military Restrictions: The treaty limited the size and capability of the German military, fostering a desire for rearmament.

2. Economic Instability and the Great Depression

The global economic turmoil of the late 1920s and early 1930s had a profound impact on the rise of totalitarian regimes and militarism in several countries, particularly in Germany and Italy.

Key Points:

- Hyperinflation in Germany: The economic devastation led to hyperinflation, causing the middle class to lose savings and stability.
- Rise of Extremist Parties: Economic despair fueled the rise of extremist political parties, such as the Nazi Party in Germany and the Fascists in Italy.
- Global Economic Crisis: The Great Depression exacerbated social unrest and discontent across Europe, creating fertile ground for aggressive nationalism.

3. The Rise of Totalitarian Regimes

The interwar period saw the emergence of totalitarian regimes that sought expansionist policies to unify their nations and gain power.

Key Points:

- Nazi Germany: Adolf Hitler's regime promoted aggressive nationalism, militarism, and a desire for Lebensraum (living space).
- Fascist Italy: Benito Mussolini aimed to restore Italy's former glory by expanding its territories.
- Japanese Militarism: Japan sought to dominate Asia and the Pacific, leading to aggressive military actions in China and beyond.

4. Failure of the League of Nations

The League of Nations was established after World War I to promote peace and prevent future conflicts. However, its inability to enforce decisions and curb aggression from member states rendered it largely ineffective.

Key Points:

- Lack of Authority: The League lacked the military capability to enforce its resolutions.
- Key Absences: Major powers such as the United States never joined, weakening the League's influence.
- Inaction Against Aggression: The League failed to respond effectively to acts of aggression, including Japan's invasion of Manchuria and Italy's invasion of Ethiopia.

5. Expansionist Policies and Aggressive Actions

The 1930s were marked by several aggressive actions by countries that would later become the Axis Powers. These actions were indicative of expansionist policies that threatened global peace.

Key Points:

1. Japan: The invasion of Manchuria in 1931 and subsequent aggression in China demonstrated Japan's imperial ambitions.
2. Italy: Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia in 1935 showcased Italy's desire for empire and a test of the League's effectiveness.
3. Germany: Hitler's reoccupation of the Rhineland in 1936 and the annexation of Austria in 1938 (Anschluss) challenged the post-World War I order.

6. Policy of Appeasement

The policy of appeasement, primarily adopted by Britain and France, aimed to prevent another war by conceding to some of Hitler's demands.

Key Points:

- Munich Agreement: In 1938, Britain and France allowed Germany to annex the Sudetenland in Czechoslovakia, hoping to satisfy Hitler's ambitions.
- Misjudgment of Hitler: Western powers underestimated Hitler's ambitions, believing he would be satisfied with limited territorial gains.
- Consequences: This policy ultimately emboldened Hitler, leading to further territorial expansion and the eventual invasion of Poland.

7. The Invasion of Poland and the Outbreak of War

The immediate cause of World War II was Germany's invasion of Poland on September 1, 1939, which prompted Britain and France to declare war on Germany.

Key Points:

- Nazi-Soviet Pact: Prior to the invasion, Hitler and Stalin signed the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, dividing Eastern Europe between them and ensuring that Germany would not face a two-front war.
- Blitzkrieg Strategy: Germany employed a new military strategy known as Blitzkrieg, or "lightning war," which involved rapid and coordinated attacks using air and ground forces.
- British and French Response: The invasion of Poland marked the failure of appeasement and prompted Britain and France to fulfill their pledges to defend Polish sovereignty.

8. Conclusion

The causes of World War II are rooted in a complex web of political, economic, and social factors that evolved over two decades after World War I. The Treaty of Versailles, economic instability, the rise of totalitarian regimes, the failure of the League of Nations, aggressive expansionist policies, and the policy of appeasement all contributed to the environment that led to global conflict. Understanding these causes is essential for comprehending not only the war itself but also the subsequent geopolitical landscape that emerged in its aftermath.

In summary, the worksheet on the causes of World War II can be effectively filled out by recognizing these key elements and understanding how they interrelated to create a perfect storm that culminated in one of history's most devastating wars.
