The chapter begins by examining the historical context that set the stage for the Civil War. Understanding the backdrop of this conflict is essential for grasping the motivations and attitudes of both the Union and Confederate sides.

Key Factors Leading to War

1. Slavery: The institution of slavery was the most contentious issue that divided the nation. The Southern states relied heavily on slave labor for their agricultural economy, while the Northern states were increasingly moving towards abolition and free labor.
2. State Rights vs. Federal Authority: The debate over the rights of states versus the power of the federal government was another significant point of contention. Southern states believed they had the right to govern themselves and make their own laws, particularly regarding slavery.
3. Economic Differences: The North was more industrialized and had a diverse economy, while the South was predominantly agrarian. These economic differences created divergent interests, leading to conflict over tariffs and trade policies.
4. Political Tensions: The rise of the Republican Party and figures such as Abraham Lincoln, who opposed the expansion of slavery into the territories, fueled Southern fears of losing political power.

The Election of 1860

The chapter highlights the pivotal election of 1860, which was a turning point in American history. The election results significantly impacted the relationship between the North and South.

Candidates and Their Positions

The election featured four main candidates, each representing different factions and ideologies:

- Stephen A. Douglas (Northern Democrat): Supported popular sovereignty, allowing territories to decide for themselves about slavery.
- John C. Breckinridge (Southern Democrat): Championed the protection of slavery in all territories.
- John Bell (Constitutional Union): Sought to preserve the Union by avoiding the slavery issue altogether.

Results and Reactions

- Lincoln's Victory: Lincoln won the presidency without securing a single Southern electoral vote, demonstrating the deep regional divides in the country.
