Understanding Cicchetti

Cicchetti are small snacks or side dishes typical of Venetian cuisine, often served in bars and osterias throughout the city. They can be enjoyed at any time of day, but they are particularly popular during the traditional Venetian aperitivo, usually held in the late afternoon or early evening.

The Origins of Cicchetti

Cicchetti has its roots in the Venetian tradition of enjoying small bites with drinks. Historically linked to the practice of sharing and socializing, these small dishes reflect the city's maritime heritage and agricultural bounty. The word "cicchetto" itself is derived from the verb "ciccare," which means "to sting," possibly referring to the bite-sized nature of these snacks.

Types of Cicchetti

While cicchetti can vary widely, here are some common types you may encounter during your tour:

1. Baccalà Mantecato: Creamy, whipped cod spread served on crostini.
2. Sarde in Saor: Marinated sardines with onions, raisins, and pine nuts.
3. Polpette: Meatballs that can be made from a variety of ingredients, often served with a rich sauce.
4. Carciofi alla Giudia: Fried artichokes, crispy on the outside and tender within.
