Each type of entity has its own legal framework, advantages, and responsibilities. Understanding these distinctions is essential for business owners to choose the right structure for their needs.

1. Corporations

Delaware corporations are governed by the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL), one of the most flexible and comprehensive corporate statutes in the United States. Key features include:

- Formation: To form a corporation, one must file a Certificate of Incorporation with the Delaware Secretary of State.
- Board of Directors: Corporations are required to have a board of directors responsible for making significant business decisions.
- Shareholders: Shareholders own the corporation and have rights to vote on major issues, such as electing the board and approving mergers.
- Limited Liability: Shareholders are typically not personally liable for the debts and liabilities of the corporation.

2. Limited Liability Companies (LLCs)

Limited Liability Companies in Delaware are governed by the Delaware Limited Liability Company Act. LLCs offer a blend of corporate and partnership features, making them popular among small business owners. Key aspects include:
